

Lambert concert pauses during storm

Miranda Lambert was probably the most famous person to make a severe weather announcement in Wichita last night.

The country music star was performing at Intrust Bank Arena, the latest stop on her “On Fire” tour, when at about 10:05 she passed on the message from arena personnel that dangerous weather was on the way and fans should remain in the arena’s seating area.

Many fans headed to a hallway at the south end of the arena, but many stayed in the seats. Order was difficult to restore, and staff had to yell directions multiple times. Some apparently couldn’t hear them.

There was no sign that severe weather was passing — no loud noises — and at about 10:40 an announcement was made that the severe weather had passed.
